STONE LEGENDS

Entry Legend

As Rome expanded, embracing the experiences of the Hellenistic world, porticos became a part of the urban landscape.

The technique of building with cast stone was perfected during this period.

Our entries will welcome you and your guests into your home. Their classical designs make them appropriate for any environment. Entries can be as simple or as elaborate as desired and can include columns, pilasters, face stone, profiled surrounds, entablatures, and balustrade.

The choice is yours, to express your taste in your home. This section of the catalog is designed to spark your imagination. You can use any of the existing entries shown on the following pages, combine elements from different entries or have us design something unique to suit you and your project.

Many of the flat entries are great as an interior door units too, single- or double-faced!

Think of this – when someone rings your doorbell, you will want them to be impressed by exceptional quality stone they can see and touch. Add one of our Entry Units to your project now!

Entry Unit Styles

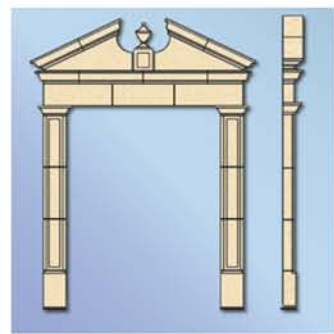

Stone Legends currently offers a wide variety of Entries, in many styles from classical shapes to a more ornate, baroque appearance. A few have optional sizes available and some can be modified in height and/or width to fit your project.

Shown on this chapter are only a few of those currently available, many with actual photos of installed units. The drawings are not to a specific scale.

For ease of use, we have categorized our entries into four styles:

Flat Entry

Entries attached directly to your structure, with minimal projection. They may or may not include door jambs or soffit returns.

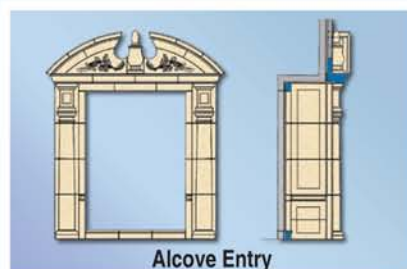

Flat Entry

Recess or Alcove Entry

Entries that stand out from the face of the building, some by as much as 3 feet or more, but are not classified as porticos.

Porch / Portico Entry

Entries that stand out from the face of the building, supporting roofs or balconies.

Alcove Entry

Full Facade Entry

Entries using stone facing for all or most of the front wall surface area. Since these are highly technical, we recommend contacting us as early in the building design process as possible.

Porch Entry
