

Italian Renaissance

The Italian renaissance period is one of the most influential in all forms of art. Many examples of world famous architecture were built during this period, such as St. Peter's Basilica, designed by Michelangelo.

- Cube-shaped
- Balanced, symmetrical façade
- Smooth stone walls, made from a smooth stucco finish
- Low-pitched hip or Mansard roof
- Roof topped with balustrade
- Wide eaves with large brackets
- Horizontal stone banding between floors
- Segmental pediments
- Ornately carved stone window trim varying in design at each story
- Smaller square windows on top floor
- Quoins (large stone blocks at the corners)

Spanish Eclectic

Homes based on early Spanish missions of pre-colonial times, mostly found in Florida and the southwest.

- Low-pitched roof
- Red roof tiles
- Little or no overhanging eaves
- Stucco siding
- Arches, especially above doors, porch entries and main windows
